Lunar Months and the "Sanctuary Year"

Length of the Month.----Nothing is said of the number of days in a month. In later times the lengths of the months and the intervals between the 13-month year were calculated by astronomical rules and fixed in a systematized calendar. But in the beginning the months must have been determined by the direct observation of the moon.

Since the phases of the moon repeat themselves every 29 ½ days, approximately, the crescent would reappear in the evening at the close of the 29th or 30th of the month. Ordinarily the months would alternate 30 and 29 days, but this was not always true. There are not only minor variations in the motion of the moon that affect the uniformity of the intervals, but also weather conditions that sometimes prevent the visibility of the crescent. We are told in later Jewish writings that it was the custom to look for the moon then at the close of the 29th.....2nd par. pp 103: In later times, certainly in the revised form of the calendar instituted some centuries after the time of Christ, the 6 months from Nisan through Elul ran 30 and 29 days alternately....

Vol. 1 SDA Bible Commentary, pp 805 Leviticus 23:24: Blowing the trumpets. On the first day of the seventh month was a Sabbath: "an holy convocation" was to be held. On that day the trumpets were blown, for the Day of Atonement was near at hand, and the first nine days of the month were to be days of preparation for it. (The first day of the seventh month of the religious calendar was New Year's Day, the first day of the civil calendar year.)
